FIRE INSURANCE NOTICES, &c. SOUTHERN PROTECTION INSURANCE COMPANY,

ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA. CAPITAL OVER 350,000 DOLLARS, AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING.
The Charter of this Company offers more favora-ble advantages to the farmer and others, than any Company chartered in the State, by insuring Company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves one eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay; or by becoming a many the same of the ware, we have deemed it expedient to change the member, and giving a small premium note, the in-sured saves nearly one-half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE. This Company commenced issuing Policies against less or damage by fire, on the 13th day of March, 1854, since which time over seven thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over seventy thousand dollars have been paid for losses. Having increased our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospeets of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe, that, by prudence, caution, and a rigid and octive, that, by principle, catholical for this system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety not surpassed by any Company in the U. States. All differences in settlement of losses, may be determined by three disinterested arbitrators of the County where such loss happened, to be mutually chosen by the insured and the Company.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

JOHN MARSHALL WHEN A YOUTH. A correspondent of the New York Century gives a pleasant account of the early days of John Marshall, who became Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. The following picture of the young man is given:

In the Spring of 1776, a number of the Virginia troops who had participated in the battle of Great Bridge, tarried, on their journey home, at the good old town of York. Among them was a young man of twenty, who became a great favorite with the gentlemen and ladies of the borough. He was tall, slender, with sparkling black eyes, and lips which were an habitual smile. In his walk, his bearing, his simple and winning gestures, were observable that characteristic called "thorough-bred." In costume he was far from presenting a very imposing appearance; his dress was plain, and some-what the worse for wear; his slouch hat was actually shabby—he plainly paid not the least attention to his personal adornment.— He had another suit which he sometimes wore, no doubt to the terror of his nervous young lady friends. This consisted chiefly of a rude cap, decorated with the tail of a buck, a leathern belt sustaining a tomahawk and conteau de chasse, and a green hunting shirt, with the words "Liberty or Death!" in large white letters on the bosom. It was the uniform of the Culpeper Minute Men, in which corps the youth held the post of lieutenant. "Tarrying thus, in the fine spring day, at Yorktown, he became a regular visitor at the houses of the old gentry who at that time made the borough an attractive spot, illustrating it with all the charms of former manners and refined festivities. Among other friends whom the young lieutenant made, was Mr. Jaquelin Ambler, Collector of Customs for the port, and afterwards Treasurer of the new Commonwealth, when his incorruptible integrity secured for him the noble name of "The Aristides of Virginia." With bler the youth soon became what was then called a "great toast;" but especially did he manage to find his way to the heart of a little damsel, only fourteen years of age-Miss Mary Willis Ambler by name. He read poetry to the ladies in his sweet voice filled with melody and pathos, waited upon them with the grand simple gallantry and knightly elegance of the old regime, and endeared himself to one and all by his kindness and
